PULLED PATRON'S LEG.

Much to the Horror of the Talkative Shoe Salesman the Member Came Off.

John Diehl, of Guttenberg, N. J., has a wooden leg, but the artificial foot receives just as good treatment as its mate. As a matter of fact, states the New York Tribune, Diehl rather prefers the wooden leg to the other, for, as he says: "I picked out the wooden one myself and it's a peach."

Such an excellent member of society is Diehl's wooden leg that its owner is able to walk with scarcely perceptible limp. Consequently, when he walked into a shoestore at Union Hill, N. J., and asked for a pair of shoes, the clerk noticed nothing unusual about his appearance. It will be apparent from what follows that Diehl is possessed of a remarkably fine sense of humor. Said he to the obliging clerk:

"Gimme a pair o' button shoes." While the clerk was getting down the goods Diehl unfastened his wooden leg and prepared himself for the merry jest that was to follow. The clerk had some difficulty in getting the worn-out shoe off the hickory limb and Diehl observed it, remarking: "Aw, bend yer back, why don't

"Kinder sticks, don't it?" said the is he place where you will get clerk, pleasantly. With this he bent his back so successfully that he carried away shoe, foot, leg and all and landed on his back into the bar-yer?

When the boot seller sat up and saw what he had done he was overwhelmed with horror.

"Great g-g-g-goodness!" he gasped. 'I didn't m-m-mean to do it." The genial Mr. Diehl was purple in the face, while a negro porter who had stood by started on the run for an ambulance. As soon as Diehl could spare time from the Holding of his sides he remarked to the crestfallen clerk: "That's all right, young feller, but y' want to be careful how you start to pull off my leg." Diehl got his shoes at a rate that he himself admitted was "real rea-

GIRL KILLS A WOLF.

Armed with a Hatchet, She Approached the Snarling Beast and Despatched It.

Miss Ethel Hoover, a young lady living at Leola, S. D., had an exciting adventure with a large gray wolf and proved herself a heroine.

Gray wolves are numerous on the great cattle ranges west of the Missouri river, and they are noted for their fierceness. The gray wolf in question evidently had strayed from its accustomed haunts by crossing the Missouri river on the ice. It appeared the other morning in the dooryard of the house where Miss Hoover resides and fiercely attacked a large shepherd dog. The animals engaged in a life and death struggle and their snarling and snapping were enough to affect the nerves of even a man. Finally the dog succeeded in getting somewhat the better of its antagonist. At this juncture Miss Hoover, instead of fleeing to the attic or cellar for safety, appeared on the scene. She was armed with a hatchet and, approaching close to where the dog and wolf were battling for life, she raised the hatchet and dealt the wolf such a blow that it was killed instantly.

HIS SINS FORGIVEN.

Boss Shepherd's Return to Washington Pleases the People.

He Ran the Capital Three Years and Made a City of It-Congress Ousted Him in 1874 and He Went to Mexico.

"Boss" Shepherd is coming back to Washington. He has made a great fortune in the silver mines of Mexico, and returns to his native city to spend his remaining days in peace He is 67 years of age, and enjoys the distinction of being the best loved and best hated man that the capital city ever knew.

Alexander H. Shepherd's name will live in history as the originator of the new Washington. After all is said and done, the work of the experts who have planned the future Washington as a city of delight had the basis of "Boss" Shepherd's work to go upon. That is how he derived his sobriquet of "boss." For three years he was the absolute ruler of Washington, and in that time spent $40,000,000 in making it what it is to Alexander H. Shepherd, says the Philadelphia Press, is a native of Washington. He was born in the "flats" January 13, 1835. His parents were in ordinary circumstances. His ancestors for 150 years had lived in this country; some of them fought in the revolutionary war. Shepherd himself was for a time a soldier in the late war. His father became well-to-do before his death, which enabled the boy to obtain a pretty fair education. He entered Columbian university. But the executor of the estate, it is said, stole the money and young Alexander started to learn a trade to help support the family. Then he became a shoe salesman, and later learned to be a plumber and gas fitter. Within eight years of entering his apprenticeship he was a partner. Within the next 12 years he had built more than 400 houses in Washington.

His prominence in business led him into politics. He was a member of ALEXANDER H. SHEPHERD. (Has Just Returned to Washington After Long Exile.)

the board of common council of Washington before he was 25. Two years after, in 1862 he became president of the body. Ite was a member of the levy court in 1867, and president of the Citizens' Reform association in 1870. Then congress turned Washington and the District of Columbia into a territoria! government. He was appointed governor of the district, and president of the board of public works. He had always borne the reputation of being a progressive, liberal, yet determined man. Washington at this time was a drowsy, half-northern, half-southern city. It had been laid out on liberal lines but had never conformed to them. It had no adequate building laws. Its streets were mud holes in winter and dust distributors in summer. Shepherd determined to alter this. He had the power and he proceeded to use it. One morning the people of the old town wakened to find hundra's of men at work on the streets. It was the advance guard of "Boss" Shapherd's legions. Within the next Gree years, from June 1, 1871, to Jula 24, 1874, "Boss" Shepherd ruled & shington with a rod of iron. Men who began by praising him ended by cursing him. As improvements grew taxes increased. Many men were financially ruined by the burdens imposed upon them. Newspapers in other cities were the only avenues for the male dictions of the citizens; the local papers were bound hand and foot by the influence of the "boss" or si lenced by a knowledge that he was doing the right thing in improving Washington, although it was unpopular at the time.

Nothing halted his determination. The city became a hive of municipal industry. All streets of any importance underwent transformation They were graded, sewered and paved, and it is now admitted that the work was well and admirably done. Some idea of the improve ments that Shepherd made in Wash ington may be gleared from these interesting figures. He planted more than 10,000 trees, and paved 118 miles of streets, besides laying 207 miles of sidewalks. His army of men dug and carted away 3,340,000 cubic yards of earth. He had constructed 317,196 feet of pipe sewers of 12 to 15 inches in diameter; four miles of sewers from 10 to 30 feet in diameter and over five miles of sew ers from 3 to 7 feet in diameter. He laid 30 miles of water pipe and nearest man in the city, and was born a ly 60 miles of gas pipe. In addition slave on the plantation of Jefferson to this he constructed 39 miles of roads in the suburbs of the city.
